

Practical 13

Write a python program to create a class named area. Define a class method find_area() that can find areas of different shapes whose value is given by the user. Invoke the class method by instantiation and prove method overloading.